++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Winds easing. Rain spreading east through Monday.

This Evening and Tonight:
A mainly dry evening with long clear spells and, with winds easing, a risk of a frost in east. Cloud increases from the west overnight with occasional light rain reaching the far west later with strengthening southerly winds.

Monday:
Bright in east at first, and in shelter, but generally cloudy with outbreaks of rain, most persistent and occasionally heavy over western hills. Very mild with occasionally strong southwesterly winds.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Breezy with showers north and west on Tuesday and Wednesday, drier and brighter in the east. Most likely dry with lighter winds much of Thursday, but rain expected later.
